What are the reputations that are important to the sustainability and competitiveness of Australian mining companies?

What are the relative contributions of mining company corporate citizenship policies to these different reputations?

How is reputation managed in the Australian mining industry?

"Reputation matters, but only when it concerns those things that matter to those people that matter to the organization." (Spencer, 2005)

Why is Reputation Important for Mining Companies?

REPUTATION Rare, Inimitable and Valuable Resource

Reputation as it facilitates

- day-to-day operations
- regulatory zeal
- access to new mine sites
- access to capital and labour

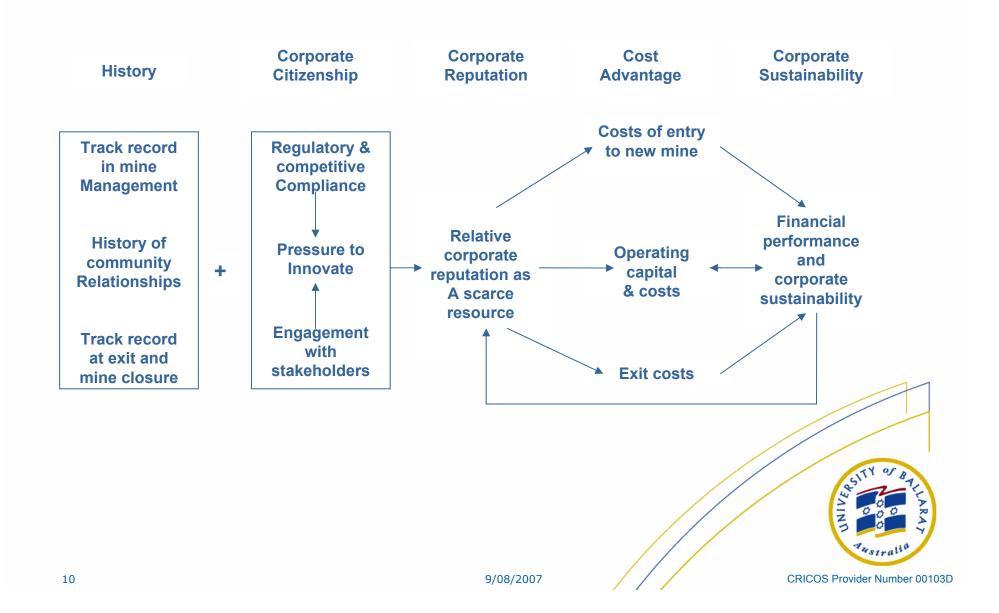

Corporate Citizenship

The role, through its activities, a business plays in society

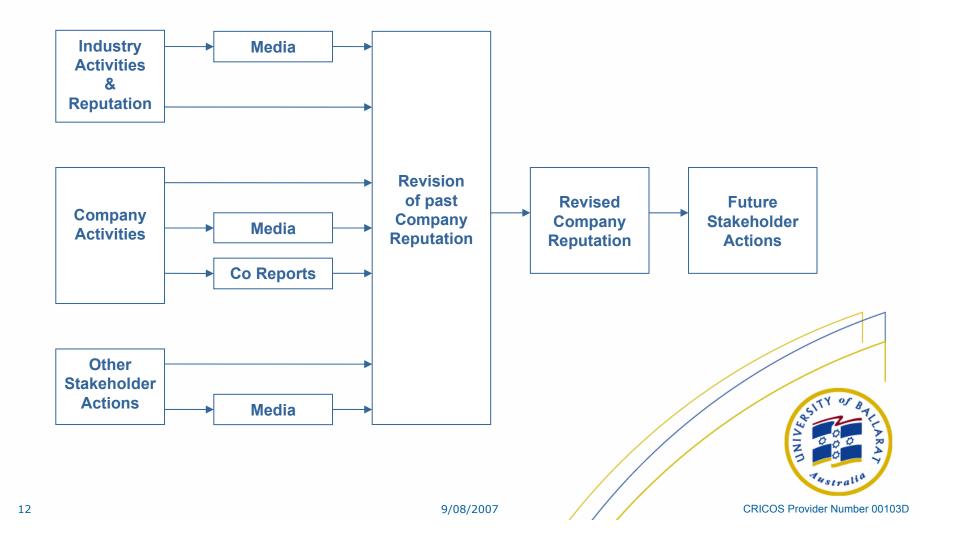

Conceptual Model Mining Company Reputation and Performance

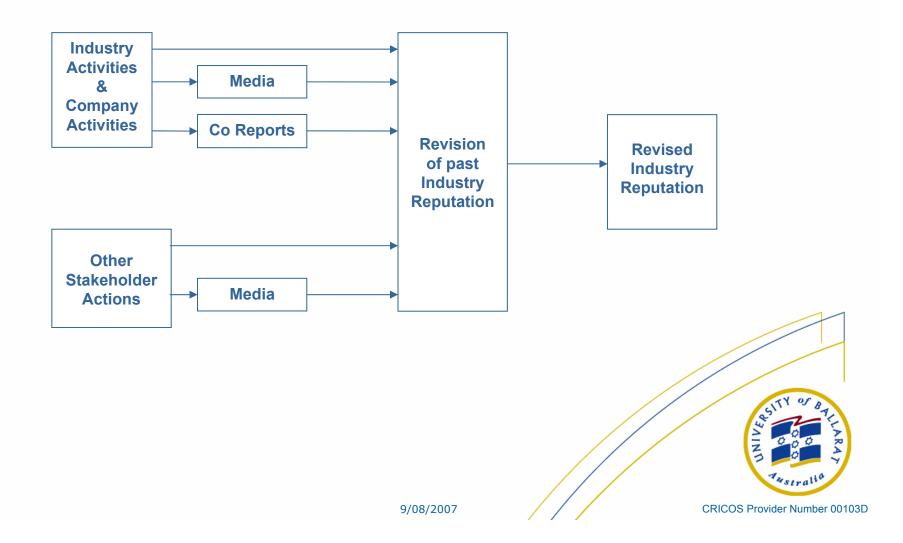

Research Propositions

- That different stakeholder groups form reputation, based upon differing signals and messages.
- That the properties and attributes of the reputation held by a stakeholder group will differ from those of other stakeholder groups.
- That a company's Corporate Citizenship policies through its actions, in addition to its performance, will impact upon reputation formation.
- That the prior reputations held by the other stakeholder groups, through their actions, will impact upon the future formation of reputation by a stakeholder group.
- That the industry reputation and other company actions will impact upon reputation formation for an individual company.
- That the signals and messages from the various drivers of reputation identified, are induced through either communication, including the media, or past experiences.
